Re: United States v. Al-Marri, No.09CR 10030

Larry,

As promised, please find attached the additional discovery regarding the DIA interrogations of your client. The attached documents are summaries of classified documents that have been approved by the Court as satisfying the government's discovery obligations. Although they are unclassified, they are provided in this case for official use only and therefore are marked accordingly.

Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have any questions about the government's position on your request for discovery.

Very truly yours,

REDACTED

In a document dated 15 September 2003, the following events were noted: When the session ended on Saturday, the guards observed that 052 was noticeably shaken by what the Interrogator had told him. 052 was trembling as he was escorted back to his cell. Later that night, 052 prayed for five straight hours—a first since his incarceration at this Brig. Sunday, guards noticed he appeared to be more nervous and restless than normal. His frequency of prayers was nearly double his usual amount (five times a day).
